

QUESTION OPENED AS TO OWNERSHIP OF KAILUA ROAD

The old question of whether the city has jurisdiction over the road in lower Kailua came up again today in a letter received by County Clerk David Kalauokalani from Nannie R. Rice, owner of the land now leased by the Kaneohe Ranch Company.

The city and county engineer's office is planning to rebuild a bridge situated on the road in question because of its dangerous condition and has advertised that the road in question will be closed during the time of repairs.

The letter states that the land is private property and the bridge a private structure and gives notice to the city that if the bridge is rebuilt the owner will claim it as her property and further that the city and county has no easement right to the road of bridge.

George Collins, city engineer, said today that he has put the matter into the hands of the city attorney for investigation.

Francis B. Sayre, President Wilson's son-in-law, who made a trip among the American troops along the Mexican border in the interest of the Young Men's Christian Association in Massachusetts, arrived at New York.

The Power of Washington--and You!

Never in the history of this territory has the cooperation of the statesmen at the national capital been more necessary to the future of Hawaii than now. Nor, if properly presented, have the prospects of a speedy and complete cooperation ever been so bright.

If I am elected Delegate to Congress, I shall thoroughly investigate the facts surrounding every industry and need of Hawaii. I shall present the results of that investigation in such a way and through such channels as to attain legislative results in the quickest and most efficacious way.

If you want the commercial conditions of the islands scientifically investigated and the proper things done in Washington to satisfy the business needs that those investigations will disclose, vote for me at tomorrow's primary.

MY MOTTO:

"The man who wins is the man who works,
Who neither labor nor trouble shirks,
Who uses his head, his hands, his eyes,
The man who wins is the man who tries."

A. L. LOUISON,
Candidate for Delegate to Congress

G. O. P. MEMBERS TO HOLD FINAL RALLY TONIGHT

Senator C. F. Chillingworth to Preside at Last Campaign Meeting at Aala

What is predicted to be the biggest G. O. P. campaign rally ever held in Honolulu is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock this evening at Aala Park, at which time the local Republican candidates will voice their final expressions of opinion to the voters before the primary election.

Tonight's meeting will bring to a close a two weeks' series of primary campaign meetings which have been held in every district of importance on Oahu, and which have been attended by nearly all of the candidates. Senator Charles F. Chillingworth, president of the upper house of the last legislature, will preside and introduce the speakers. All of the candidates are expected to be present, and each will be allowed to speak for five minutes. This should give them all an opportunity to be heard.

Between speeches Hawaiian and popular music will be furnished by a Hawaiian orchestra. Seats will be provided for the audience and it is expected that standing room will be at a premium long before the hour of the meeting.

A. Louison, the Hawaii coffee king who is opposing Jonah Kihio Kalaniano'le as candidate for delegate on the Republican ticket, today emphatically expressed his confidence of being nominated at the polls tomorrow. LATEST PIANO ATTACHMENT A MOTOR-BENCH

THE MOTO-PLAY-BENCH which is being shown at the Bergstrom Music Co.'s store is the last word in developing electric operation of player pianos. The demand has been great for a motor that could be installed in any make of player piano and save the effort necessary to operate the instrument by foot pumping. The Moto-Play-Bench is pushed up in front of any player piano and by simply attaching it to an electric light socket the old foot pump power player becomes an electrically operated player piano, and you can operate it and dance as well.—Adv.

Fair Sex Will Follow Series At Y. W. Rooms

Members of the Y. W. C. A. will be given an opportunity to follow the fortunes of the Boston Red Sox and Brooklyn Dodgers tomorrow morning. Arrangements have been made whereby the score each inning will be posted on the bulletin board for the benefit of those who wish to follow the game.

"I'll be pleased to do my share in making the bulletin return a success," said Miss Madelyn Roper, the new swimming instructor, and inasmuch as Miss Charlotte Hall and Miss Eunice Carter are real fanettes, the baseball spirit will predominate on Saturday.

D. L. WITHINGTON SAYS 8-HOUR LAW BEATING WILSON

make to swing the country's vote. Aside from his San Francisco speeches it was not as colorless by any means as some of his opponents tried to make out. At San Diego, for instance, he spoke before 30,000 people, and Southern California is well satisfied with him.

"But it was not until he got upon the Adamson bill that he began to get in the telling work. Abroad in the country, in the Middle West particularly, there was much of the 'too proud to fight' feeling, the tide of prosperity and the 'keep us out of war' talk made a tremendous burden for a candidate to go against. He had to wake the people up, and they did not want to wake up on foreign affairs."

"But when the country began to see what this Adamson law means, the Middle West, where transportation is a prime factor in prosperity, certainly waked up. Why, in Chicago there was a complete turnover of sentiment in one week."

"If Wilson is beaten, as I think he will be, the eight-hour bill will have done it largely, perhaps mainly."

"There seems no question of a bargain with organized labor whereby the labor vote was to be turned to Wilson. But these four brotherhoods which forced through the Adamson bill are not popular with the labor element at large—they are the aristocracy of labor. It is doubtful how much of a vote the union leaders can actually swing."

He tells of incidents showing that the workingmen in general realized that the Adamson law has not helped them and in fact may ultimately injure them.

"Hughes is not attacking the railroad employees on this issue, but he is pointing out exactly how this important piece of legislation was forced through Congress—exactly what it means to the country that such a thing could be done. He says, in effect, 'I don't know whether the brotherhoods had a just cause or not. Let us concede that they had—the fact remains that they did not take the right American way of getting this cause before the people—or of securing legislation.'"

"As a campaigner he is a distinct success. He has a good sense of humor, he makes his points well and he impresses every audience with his sincerity of purpose."

Mr. Withington is inclined to attribute Hughes' failure in San Francisco to the fact that he was trying to avoid some troublesome factional situation and acted under advice of Republican managers in letting alone subjects they thought might have "come-backs."

"Hughes can't do that sort of thing. He must speak his mind, as he is doing now, or he makes a failure of speaking."

The Maine election results Mr. Withington considers a distinct Republican victory, and a hopeful augury for November. He points out that the Republican vote showed a large gain, the total Republican vote being the largest in the history of Maine save in 1896, when the "sound money" Democrats voted the Republican ticket, and being only 1000 votes short of that; that the Democratic vote showed a loss, and that the Republican ticket was successful in spite of a badly-managed campaign and in opposition to a Democratic campaign superbly handled by Col. E. M. House of Texas, the President's personal adviser, and the Maine attorney-general. He says the Democrats had a remarkably fine ticket and that Col. House himself admitted he had plenty of money to spend in Maine. In spite of all this the Republican ticket showed the power of the party, and Mr. Withington believes is of significance as showing the hold of the national ticket on the voters.

As Nature's corrector of throat troubles the pure cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue; its tested glycerine is curative and healing, while this wholesome emulsion relieves the trouble and rebuilds the forces to resist tubercular germs and avert the weakening influence, which usually follows.
